Business for Good

Why Attend

In today's competitive environment, professional analysts who possess critical analytical thinking skills are a major asset for any organization. These skills involve deductive reasoning, drawing conclusions from given facts, and applying judgments to reach conclusions from a combination of evidence and assumptions. Participants in this course will learn fundamental thinking processes that can be used to analyze and solve a wide variety of business problems giving them a powerful career advantage.

Course Methodology

This course relies on the use of an interactive case study, developed specifically for this course, to demonstrate the different components of effective problem solving and successful analytical thinking. In addition to the customized case, this course utilizes individual debriefs, group discussions, role playing, and presentations.

Course Objectives

By the end of the course, participants will be able to:

- Defend the value of research and analytics in a business environment
- Apply strategic thinking to analyze their current business environment
- Structure a problem and break it down into smaller independent issues
- Create a work plan that prioritizes resources and focuses team efforts
- Identify the right sources for data through research and expert interviews
- Analyze and interpret complex data
